Do you want to contribute to fighting poverty and inequality in the world? Are you interested in climate justice, human rights and international development? And do you see climate adaptation, resilience, and mitigation as important for developing just and green societies? Then you could be the intern that we would like to engage in Oxfam's climate justice work.

Background

Oxfam Denmark is part of the international confederation, Oxfam, that works to fight extreme inequality in the world. As an intern, you will contribute to this work in developing countries, globally, and in Denmark.

Task examples

- Analysis, mapping and documentation of climate-related topics and processes.
- Support project-related work within the climate justice thematic area.
- Communication work - including newsletters, case stories, and visual presentations.
- Support planning and facilitating events, workshops and processes related to our climate work – both online and physical.
- Participate in national and international task teams and networks on Climate Justice.
- Support internal mainstreaming of climate and environmental issues to reduce Oxfam Denmark's carbon footprint.
- Ad-hoc support to the Economic Justice team approx. 1 day per week.

Competencies required

- You are currently undertaking a master degree in Denmark in a relevant field.
- You are interested in climate justice and international development, and preferably have some practical experience, for example as a volunteer or climate activist.
- You have good strategic thinking and planning skills that enable you to work with project development.
- You are capable of working independently and as part of a team to reach a common goal.
- You possess good writing skills and communicate complex issues in a simple and understandable way – both orally and in writing.
- You speak and write English fluently. Danish will be an asset.
- You like being part of a team of good colleagues and engage in social activities.

We offer

Working hours are 37 hours (full time) per week and the duration of the internship is 5 months starting 01 September 2025. We are flexible in terms of adapting working hours to your studies and any student jobs so 30 to 37 hours per week can be agreed. Read more about the requirements and conditions for doing an internship at Oxfam Denmark at Internship at Oxfam Denmark.

You will get a thorough insight into an organization that seeks to make the world a better place for the poorest and most marginalized people through advocacy and information work. You will be part of a dynamic, committed and fun workplace in Copenhagen with great opportunities for professional development and networking with our other interns. The organisation will be moving to Lyngbyvej 100, 2100 København Ø, in September 2025.

As we cannot offer our interns a salary, it is a requirement that you receive SU. However, we offer you a free lunch scheme (mainly vegetarian) and the opportunity to participate in morning yoga once a week.

Application process

Click on the Apply button and submit your application and CV to us as soon as possible and no later than 16 April. We will conduct interviews during the weeks after Easter.

If you have any questions about the internship, you are welcome to contact Senior Programme Manager for project climate justice, Morten Gøbel Poulsen at mgp@oxfam.dk.

Please note that we do not accept applications outside of our recruitment system. We encourage everyone qualified to apply for the position – regardless of ethnic background, gender, sexual orientation, disability, religion, or age.

To be employed by Oxfam, you will need to sign the Code of Conduct and Anti-Corruption policies, and we will obtain your criminal and child abuse records.

About Oxfam Denmark

We have the world's best case and high ambitions. Oxfam Denmark is an independent and member-based development organisation. Through education, support for civil society and in collaboration with our partners, we fight inequality and poverty in the Global South. Together with 20+ other organisations, we make up the Oxfam International Confederation, one of the world's largest and most influential development organisations. In Denmark, we are a clear and significant player in the public debate on tax havens, increasing inequality, and the right to education. You can read more about Oxfam Denmark at About Oxfam
